A camp for kids of our nation’s heroes

Sasha Bradford has been inundated with unsolicited tips.

Two years ago, her husband Michael was killed in Afghanistan. Sasha found out not long after her death that she was seven months pregnant.

Today, the 24-year-old wife and mother to six-year-old Sasha Roman and her son, Michael, are thriving. She successfully gave birth to their little boy, 11-month-old David.

The experience was anything but easy for the young widow. Pregnant for the first time, the couple was hit with the shock of losing her husband in a war she knew little about.

Michael died two weeks before his thirtieth birthday. Hispaniola-born Michael, who had once been a varsity baseball player, was a dedicated service member and a man of strong character.

Sasha said of veterans, “They have held the hand of someone that was important to them. They have given pieces of their heart, mind and body to protect us. We have the ability to make a difference. Why not for individuals who have given so much for us.”

Sasha also participates in the event herself. She said, “I love the fact that we are able to combine outdoor activities with the impact of the event.”

Michael’s death has been a learning experience for Sasha. “If I could, I would go back and change not a single thing, “she said. “It is not easy for anyone, “ she said. “It is not easy for anyone.”
